COUNCIL BALKS AT ZONING LAW

With President Kennedy calling for new civil defense preparations, the Pennies Photographer inquired of five area residents, "What measures have you taken to prepare for civil defense?"

Answers and pictures of the five appear below:

Red Moon, 1024 Amapola:

"Torrance is located in a critical area due to the aircraft industries. I do not believe it would help to construct home shelters or make extensive escape plans. Even fall-out shelters would be of practically no use since the area would probably be totally destroyed."

Irene Masaki, 3591 Spencer:

"My family has not begun to plan a shelter due to the apparent lack of urgency. There is no immediate danger, but I believe the Berlin situation will start many people thinking about civil defense. I believe many people don't do more about shelters because they do not know what they are."

Jamse Armstrong, 608 Ave. D, Redondo:

"I do not plan to evacuate the area in case of an attack. As a teacher, I would be required to stay with my class until I was relieved. I would then go to my home to be with my family. I do not have a shelter, but I have a basic plan of where to meet and what to do."

Doris Avis, 337 Calle Miramar:

"Since Torrance is in the center of a great many vital industries, we are probably a main target. Therefore my preparation for civil defense has been to purchase a cemetery lot. That is where I will go, if they can find all of the pieces."

Harry Van Bellehem, 239 Paseo de Las Delicias:

"In the area where I live, all of our utilities are underground. I have recently been checking the manhole covers around my home and I have found that one of these is adjacent to a gas line. In case it was necessary to dig, I believe it would be best bet to go underground."

Saturday and Sunday

Top Cowboys Due in Town For Rodeo

Action-packed entertainment in the form of a western rodeo comes to Torrance Saturday and Sunday for a two-day, two-performance stand at the arena behind the Police Station. The show starts at 2:30 each afternoon and will be preceded by a western parade Saturday morning at 10.

Rodeo co-ordinator Lt. D.C. Cook has said that this year's rodeo promises to be the best in the seven-year history of the local show. Stock, which includes some of the best in the circuit, will be furnished by the Andy Jauregui string out of Newhall.

THE TORRANCE-RCA Rodeo is one of the Southland's finest rodeo shows. Points and money won in the event will be counted toward the National Rodeo Championships, to be decided in Dallas, Tex., in the early fall.

Among the most exciting events at the rodeo will be the competition bull riding — the only event in which the animals will deliberately attack their riders.

The rodeo clown, his baggy clothing and painted face providing as much entertainment as any event, comes into play in the bull riding contest. It is his job to divert the 1500 pounds of beef-on-the-hoof from attacking a fallen cowboy, and he relies on much stored-up knowledge of bovine behavior to accomplish his task.

NOT SO dangerous, but more exciting to watch, is the girl barrel racing event slated for this year's Torrance performances. Other events will include calf roping, bronc riding, and trick riding.

Starting the action for the weekend will be a western parade which will form at Cabrillo and Carson at 10 a.m. and march through the downtown area to the civic center. Horses and other entries from Santa Barbara and El Centro will be on hand to help Torrance residents celebrate the week end.

All seats at the rodeo are close to the action. Admission for children under 12 will be 75 cents and general admission will be $1.50.

EVEN UNDER STRESS

HURT IN FALL . . . Kirk Moore, nine-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Moore, 24446 Neece Ave., was injured Wednesday afternoon when he fell from the roof of a garage. The boy was taken to the Little Company of Mary Hospital where he was listed as in fair condition late yesterday. He suffered cuts and abrasions and had one back laceration caused by hitting a bicycle in the fall. (Photo by Bob Deurlon) about or a period of great national stress, strikes, rain, sunshine, or snow.

When President Kennedy arrived last June it was raining and Paris was set to give him a reception rarely equaled in the history of the city. The sun came out occasionally to smile on tens of thousands of American and French flags specially hung for the occasion; but cold, grey weather failed to daunt the spirit of thousands who gathered along the streets and sidewalks wherever the young American leader was scheduled to pass. The President himself scored a triumph for Franco-American relations but, even so, he had to take second billing to his beautiful wife who, in pictures at least, got more space in the newspapers than the chief executive. The French women seem to regard Jacqueline Kennedy as the epitome of just how a woman should look and even treat her French ancestry as carte blanche citizenship.

AMERICAN visitors may be divided into two distinct classes: those who think everything the Parisians do is perfect and those who think Parisians are insulting, rude, and outspoken in their contempt for Americans. No group of nationalists is perfect and there are good Frenchmen and bad Frenchmen just as there are bad Americans and good Americans. In several visits to Paris, however, we have never experienced any insults and have found few of the bourish cab drivers so many Americans talk about.

PRICES ARE ridiculously high, the food highly overrated and there are few bargains in the stores. I can say this with authority for I have a wife who is a Sherlock Holmes in ferreting out things worth having at prices that are right. When shopping she has the stamina of a marathon athlete and the patience of a breadliner. And, for that matter, go to Europe to see the grandeur of its cities and countryside but don't go looking for bargains. You can get most of what you will see in American stores and save yourself a lot of trouble. Buy the perfume, some of the hand made articles and the other knick-knacks for mementos. Don't "go broke" buying the bargains. You'll do better at home (Continued on Page 3)

Holds Ruling On Rezoning For 30 Days

Proposed rezoning of 150 acres of industrial property to permit construction of single family residences which gained the approval of a majority of the council last week was delayed again Tuesday night when an enabling ordinance was set off agenda until Sept. 5.

Acting on a motion introduced by Councilman Willys Blount, the council was unanimous in voting for the delay.

In a companion motion, City Manager Wade Peebles was instructed to investigate the costs of a professional survey on the city's industrial property.

Accident Kills One, Three Hurt

One woman was killed and three other persons seriously injured Monday afternoon in a freeway crash near San Clemente.

Dead on arrival at South Coast Community Hospital was Mrs. Elva Mooneyham, 51, of 21726 Halldale Ave. Her husband, Arvin, also 51, suffered severe chest injuries and was reported in critical condition at the hospital.

Mooneyham's car was southbound on the San Diego freeway when it was involved in a crash with a car driven by Peter Wren, Jr., 23, of Los Angeles. Both Wren and his passenger, Edward Dalmatoff, 23, of Los Angeles, were seriously injured.

Police said that Wren's car turned over twice after the collision near the El Camino on-ramp.

CONTROVERSIAL TREE . . . Tony Gamble, of the Insomniac art gallery, gazes at a modern sculpture by Otto Pettijohn which has become the object of some wrath. City officials claim the "tree" is a sign and as such requires a building permit which the owners did not take out. The artist and the art gallery defend it as a work of art and say it is not a sign.
